Giant River Otter Search

Morning

Half Day

Difficulty level

Giant River Otter Search

This is a morning activity that requires an early start (as soon as we start we have a better chance of seeing more wildlife). To get there, we have to walk to the river to take the boat and take a 15 minute boat ride upstream, then walk for 25 to 30 minutes to get to the lake. Once there, we will paddle in a comfortable catamaran in search of all kinds of wildlife and, of course, the family of giant river otters is our main target.

This place itself is beautiful and is home to different species of wildlife such as the black caiman, many types of birds and monkeys such as squirrel monkeys.

Ceiba Walk

Morning or Afternoon

2.5 Hours

Ceiba Walk

For this activity, we will walk from the lodge for approximately 2 hours through a pristine forest passing through two different types of forest (terra firme and flooded forest) with great possibilities to look for some wildlife.

At the end a huge Ceiba (Lupuna) awaits us, towering above the forest.

Difficulty level

Ethnobotanical Center of Ñape

We will go down the river for 15 minutes to the Native Community of Infierno of the Ese'Eja ethnic group who have a Medicinal Center; where they heal their people using local medicine; which is still part of their knowledge inherited from their ancestors, nowadays in combination with western medicine.

While we are on the river, we could look for more wildlife, such as the well-known ronsoco, considered the largest rodent on the planet.

A photograph of a forest floor covered with numerous large, round, brown Brazilian nuts. Some nuts are whole, while others are cracked open, revealing the dark, oily nutmeat inside. The ground is covered in dry leaves and twigs. In the background, the legs and feet of people are visible, suggesting a group activity in a natural setting.

Brazilian Nut Trail & Camp

Morning or Afternoon

2 Hours

Difficulty level

Brazilian Nut Trail & Camp

This hike is a beautiful ancient patch of Brazil nut forest that has been harvested for decades (if not centuries) where you can still experience the remnants of a camp used two months a year by Brazil nut gatherers. We will demonstrate the entire process of the only sustainably harvested product of the rainforest, from harvesting to transportation, drying and the products we consume. And as an added bonus, this hike around the forest allows you another opportunity to see more wildlife.

For this activity, we walk about 2 hours round trip.

Night Lectures

After spending the day exploring the incredible beauty of the Amazon rainforest, we do something a little different in the evening. While you relax at the lodge, our field researchers give you a taste of our jungle initiatives. These evening lectures enrich your experience and immerse you in fun and engaging stories and experiences.

Evening lectures prepared by Wired Amazon's team of researchers at Posada Amazonas to cover threats, opportunities and conservation projects in the Tambopata National Reserve.

Discovering New Species

Help us reveal the wonders of nature, become a scientist and have the opportunity to discover a new species - there's an amazing world of diversity waiting to be explored! We will meet the resident research team in the lobby for a brief explanation of the types of specimens we will be looking for and how to identify them.

We will be given the necessary tools for collecting and will walk about 15 minutes from the lodge to the light trap, where an amazing variety of insects will be waiting for us. We will search for and collect certain types of insects and, if we are lucky, we may discover a new species!

Parrot Claylick

Just a 15 to 20 minute walk from the lodge to the river bank, we will find a hide where we will wait for the bird to gather in the trees and eventually land on the bank to eat clay. Scientists don't know exactly why parrots do this, but suspect it has to do with mineral deficiencies.

Different types of wildlife feed on sagebrush, such as Spix's guans, howler monkeys, and peccaries.

Oxbow Lake

Morning or Afternoon

Half Day

Difficulty level

Oxbow Lake

After walking away from the Tambopata River, past the hanging nests of Oropendola birds and fluttering fruit bats, you arrive at the lake. Separated by only a thin strip of land from the river, this lake is a world away from those torrential waters. Here, tranquility reigns.

But the lake's calm waters and beautiful scenery belie the wild creatures, from small to giant, that lurk just below the surface.

On a visit to the lake, you will experience one of the Amazon's most important and distinctive habitats. They are formed when the meander of a river separates from its main channel, transforming it into a tranquil lake.
